5 Major Trends in Solar Marketing from Spring 2019

By Maurine Hainsworth | May 1, 2019

Now that we're already five months into the year and summer is quickly approaching, it's time we revisit some of the digital marketing trends we've been keeping our eye on — particularly those that relate to the solar industry.

As a follow-up to last week's webinar about key marketing trends in the solar industry, here are five major trends you should be aware of if you are a solar contractor.

Messaging for the Federal Tax Credit Step Down

As a solar contractor, you're well aware of the Federal Investment Tax Credit (ITC) and how that 30% deduction for solar PV systems will drop to 26% after this year. If you're not already putting out messaging about the Federal Solar Tax Credit step down, then you definitely should be.

We recommend placing your messaging in prominent areas on your website, such as near your primary call-to-action or in its own section on the home page.

On the Sky Power Solar website, for example, there is an educational section about the Solar Tax Credit step down right below the contact form on the home page:

Challenge Accepted #02: Marketing Healthy Home Services

By Shawn Cohen | April 17, 2019

For those readers who missed the first installation of "Challenge Accepted!", here's a quick introduction to Energy Circle's latest digital marketing content series:

Each month, we'll identify and explore a unique marketing problem or request that is relevant to the better building and clean energy industries. We'll start by outlining the details of the problem: What's the challenge?

Next, we'll lay out a recommended solution—an approach to strategy, planning, execution, and optimization, all designed to offer a behind-the-scenes look at how the digital strategy and marketing experts at Energy Circle tackle some of the HVAC, home performance, and solar industries' toughest marketing challenges!

Today's Challenge: How to market Healthy Home Services

The Ask

In Short: How do we reach people whose homes may be making them sick, and help them make it better?

In Long: Healthy home services, in the context of home performance and the better building industry, are a challenging concept to communicate, and an even more challenging service to sell. The target audience may be aware that they're suffering from something causing illness or discomfort in their homes, but they tend to be uninformed about the performance issues in their house that could be causing symptoms like asthma, fatigue, sleep problems, allergies, etc.
