How to Handle Too Many Leads: Marketing Strategies for Busy Contractors

By Emily Silverman | February 23, 2022

If you're like most contractors, you focus your marketing efforts on growing leads. You want to bring in more customers, sell more jobs, and make more money. But what happens when you have too many leads?

That's the reality for contractors across the country right now. With interest in home improvement services growing while supply chain issues and hiring challenges persist, contractors are drowning in more leads than they can handle.

So how do you slow the flow and manage customer expectations when you're booked out for months? You may think you need to put your marketing efforts on pause while you catch up. But marketing can play a key role in managing an overflowing pipeline. Here's how:

Use Your Marketing Budget to Strengthen Your Foundation

A good portion of your monthly marketing budget probably goes towards active lead generation, like Google ads and paid Facebook ads. But during times of plenty, you don't need to be spending as much on lead generation. This frees up a significant portion of your budget which you can use to strengthen the foundational aspects of your brand, website, and online presence. Focus on:

WEBSITE	Content, Design & Conversion Audit
GOOGLE MY BUSINESS	Traffic & Conversion Review, Image/Q&A Completeness
SEARCH RANKINGS	Assessment of Traffic & Keyword Performance
SOCIAL PRESENCE	Activity, Engagement, Traffic
REVIEWS	Quantity in Google, Averages, Diversity, Content
VIDEO	Quantity, Views Data, YouTube Channel

What the New Google Vision Tool Means for Contractors' Websites

By Jake VP | February 11, 2022

Ever heard of Google Vision AI? Through machine learning, this AI tool analyzes images to identify objects and faces, read handwriting or printed text, and more. If Google can scan the images on your website or Business Profile and recognize the most important products or objects relevant to your services, there should be a way for first mover companies to take advantage. So we figured it was time to start tracking—how smart is mother Google about images that matter to our industry?
